Observations..

By the Editor

The syndicate controlling the operations of slot machines in the County and their yes men were trying to gather some consolation from the fact that Judge Russell, continued the hearing of the slot machine cases and did not hear the demurrers at this time of court. . . . the hue and cry went out that the judge refused to hear them. . . . the boy going through the cemetery at night, whistling to keep up his courage. . . . Judge Russell, rightly continued these cases. . . . there is pending in the supreme court of Mississippi, several cases from this County, on appeal, in which the facts and the law are the same as the cases presently filed, and a former judge of the Supreme Court granted a supersedeas in these cases, allowing the operation of slot machines until the final hearing of the cases. . . . if Judge Russell had passed on the demurrers filed in the present cases, and had overruled them and had issued injunctions the defendants would have had the right of appeal and since the issue has not been decided by the Supreme Court as yet, certainly, since a former judge had granted a supersedeas the probability is that the court would have granted one in this matter and another delay in ridding the county of the racket would have been the answer. . . . as it is now. . . . a motion to advance the cases on appeal has been made to the Supreme Court, and a decision will probably be had at an early date. . . . and our guess is that the Supreme Court will uphold Judge Russell's decision, that the slot machine is a gambling device, and that the injunctions should be made permanent as and when this decision is rendered. . . . the Chancellor is sustained, he will then entertain a motion for a temporary injunction. . . . and then the temporary high spirits of the boys in the racket will become temporarily dampened, for it will mean the end of their regime. . . . we want to express our congratulations to Hardin Shattuck, the five-wide-awake manager of the Coast Electric Power Association upon his election as president of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce. . . . it was our hope that Ted Robin would continue for another year to complete a worthwhile program he had inaugurated. . . . and this too would have allowed Hardin an opportunity to complete the building program for his association, at which time he would be far more free to carry on the work of the Chamber of Commerce. . . . with all we think he is equal to the occasion, and you may rest assured the chamber of Commerce will have a good year under his guidance. . . . remember boys, it takes work, to produce results and personal and petty political differences must be dropped by the wayside in order to have full co-operation. . . . the Mississippi Seafood Commission might look into the complaint of the residents of Clermont Harbor. . . . these civic minded people built an oyster reef at their expense, off shore, and on Tuesday of this week a lugger was on the reef taking away the oysters these people planted to better their fishing grounds and to be used for their own purposes. . . . it seems they should have some protection. . . . the highway Drive Inn Theatre of Norman Benigno is really beginning to take shape. . . . the grounds are being graded and the neon sign is being installed and it will not be long ere this will be a reality. . . . The St. Stanislaus-G. C. M. A. game is going to be broadcast over station W. G. C. M.

Call Special Session Of Legislature To Discuss New Highway Program

Gov. Fielding Wright issued a special call Monday, Oct. 31, for a special session of the state legislature to start Nov. 14. Consideration of a 15 year highway program will be the main business under discussion. The proposal for a two-cent-per-gallon hike in the gasoline tax to finance the program will be taken up. Supporters of the program will ask for action on the gas tax increase first, said State Senator J. O. Clark of Iuka, chairman of the committee which drafted the program. There will be no point in considering the program to set up an 11,650 mile system, if the tax measure is defeated, Clark said. If, on the other hand, the tax passes, it should not be too difficult to obtain agreement on the road program. "The program would be impotent without a financial plan sufficient to support it," Clark said. "It will take two cents a gallon." He made it plain that supporters of the program would accept no compromise. Waiting to hear whether all members of the legislature would agree to a special session, Gov. Wright delayed for more than a week before issuing the call. At the last session an act was passed setting up a highway study committee. This act also called on the governor to call a special session if that committee recommended it. "After offering the legislators who voted for said bill the opportunity to register any change of mind or to protest a session at this time, only a small minority have indicated their opposition," Gov. Wright said.

Pecan Regulations Cited By Dept. of Agriculture

The initial grade and size regulations for pecan marketing has been announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This pecan marketing agreement and other program became effective Oct. 20. It is of interest to farmers in this area because it gives specific instructions to pecan growers and handlers. The new marketing program follows a recommendation of the Handlers Advisory Council and the Administrative Committee functioning under the program which covers Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, and South Carolina. The new regulations are as follows: new pecans shipped for distribution in unshelled form out of the five state area must not be below U. S. Commercial Grade, must not be smaller than 90 nuts per pound, and must meet other specified standards. Inspection by the federal state or Federal Inspection Service will be made for unshelled distribution except shipments of 200 pounds, or less, a day to any one consignee. Pecans for chelling and processing outside the five-state area may be shipped without prior inspection, provided satisfactory arrangements have been made in advance by the shipper with the administrative committee. After a public hearing in late May and early June, the pecan marketing agreement and order program was developed. More than two thirds of the pecan growers approved the program by voting in a referendum and by growers who produced more than two-thirds of the poundage represented in the voting. The program was proposed by the Southeastern Pecan Growers Association and the Pecan Distributors Association. In an attempt to stimulate demand for good pecans, and improve returns to growers, the associations stated that they wished to withhold low quality and very small size pecans from the market. An average of 12.9 cents a pound was paid to pecan growers in the five-state area for the 1948 crop year, which was 25 per cent of parity. The normal procedure of selling pecans to local buyers and processors will not be interfered with by the new regulations. The managing agent for the Pecan Administrative Committee is W. E. Leigh, 911 Ogletown Ave., Albany, Georgia.

The boys saw a film, "Twelve Months Green," which was filmed in color, and whose subject matter was Mississippi pastures.

The Halloween square dance, sponsored by the Kiln seniors, in the high school gym Friday evening, Oct. 28, was a "howling" success. They realized a nice sum for their treasury, and everybody had a good time.

In the high school club, Joyce Shyon was elected president; Pat Favre, vice-president; and Margaret Bennett, secretary and treasurer.

DEDUCT MONEY OWED FROM NSL REFUNDS

More than a half-million veterans who owe the Government money for the result of overpayments on subsistence allowances or other veterans benefits or benefits on loans guaranteed by the Veterans Administration may find all or part of their share of the forthcoming special dividend payment on National Service Life Insurance deducted to cover their debts, VA said today.

VA estimated that somewhere between 20 and 30 million dollars of such debts may be collected from the NSL dividends.

All of the individuals concerned are aware of their indebtedness to the Government and know that it is deductible from other VA payments to which they may be entitled, the Agency said.

Some 600,000 veterans are currently indebted to VA for a total of about 70 million dollars. The bulk of this amount constitutes overpayments on subsistence allowances for veterans taking educational courses or training under the GI Bill.

Other types of indebtedness are overpayments on pension, compensation or readjustment allowances, and losses made good to lenders on defaulted GI loans.

A considerable number of veterans are now repaying indebtedness by having deductions from their monthly checks. When the overpayment is wiped out, as it may be by the dividend deductions, there

COUNTY AGENT'S NOTES

Give "Treatment" To Fence Posts

By Howard F. Simmons

The present fence post supply of durable species in Mississippi is not adequate to satisfy the greatly increased farm fencing requirements.

If these requirements are to be met by wood fence posts, it will be necessary to give non-durable fence post species a preservative treatment in order to make them more durable. This practice will help to satisfy the greatly increased demand for durable fence posts. In addition, a more complete utilization of the farm woodland crop will be possible since a use will be provided for a class of material now in the woods which according to present utilization standards is difficult to market.

Treating fence posts with pentachlorophenol-fuel oil solutions by the cold-soaking method is one of the several limited-purpose treatments for lengthening the service lives of non-durable fence post species.

THE PRESERVATIVE
Pentachlorophenol (which shall be referred to simply as penta) is a highly toxic chemical which is moderately soluble in oils and other organic solvents, but only very slightly soluble in water. Penta is not a new preservative. It was first used in 1936. Application of the penta at this time was made by the pressure-treating method. Service records of the tests conducted in 1936 with

Penta pressure-treated fence posts show that today nearly 100 percent of these posts are serviceable.

The penta is available in crystalline and liquid form. The concentrate must be diluted with a petroleum solvent, such as tractor fuel, kerosene, or diesel fuel (not heavier than No. 2).

We are concerned only with the cold-soaking method of applying the penta preservative to round fence posts.

The cold-soaking method has been selected because it is a relatively simple method and requires a small investment in treating equipment.

This makes the cold-soaking method very satisfactory for use by the farmer who treats fence post primarily to satisfy his own fencing needs.

There are many different types of treating tanks from which the farmer may choose. The tank must be large enough to hold the fence posts, and must be oil-tight.

CUTTING AND PEELING

Fence post may be cut during any season of the year. Cutting in any particular season has advantages and disadvantages. If the posts are cut during the winter months (November through March), damage from fungi and insects is apt to be less than during the warm, humid season. Also, farm labor is generally more available during this period of the year. Winter cutting permits a partial seasoning of the fence posts prior to the spring and summer months, during which time fungi and insects cause the most damage.

If the posts are cut during the spring and summer months (April through July), peeling is much easier, and can be done at a smaller cost. Also, the length of the seasoning period is shorter for posts cut at this time of the year. The disadvantages of spring and summer cutting are (1) farmers are busily engaged attending to agricultural crops, (2) fungi and insects are very active, and (3) hardwood fence post species check very rapidly during this period.

All posts should be peeled within 24 hours after they are cut. The peeling operation should remove all of the inner bark in addition to the outer bark. Failure to remove all of the inner bark will result in spotty penetration of the preservative. Peeling tools can be made from old hoes and worn shovels. In cases where a large number of fence posts is to be treated, the purchase of a power post peeler might be advisable.

STACKING AND SEASONING

Posts should be stacked in crib-fashion by species. If a large number of posts of one species is being treated, the stacks should be made up of the same size posts. In each layer should be at least 18 inches from the ground. In stacking hardwoods for seasoning, the pile should be covered with boards, sheet metal or roofing paper. This will help to prevent excessive checking. Posts cut in the spring or summer should season 3 to 4 months, and posts cut in fall or winter should season for 5 or 6 months.

Since penta may cause a skin irritation to some people, rubber gloves should be worn when the hands are exposed to the chemical. It is also wise to wear a heavy cloth or rubber apron in order to protect the outer clothing. Fire should always be kept away from the treating site. After treating, or after the preservative has come into contact with the skin, the exposed parts of the body should be washed freely with plenty of soap and warm water. Livestock should be kept away from the treating site.

When using treated fence posts, the cost of putting up the fence probably will not have to be repeated until the end of the 10th or 15th year. During the anticipated 10 to 15-year service life period, the fence should require little, if any, replacement of individual fence posts.

When using untreated fence posts, it will be necessary to inspect the fence frequently and to replace fence posts which have become unserviceable. This replacement will be a continual process. On the average, each untreated fence post will have to be replaced about once every two years. This type of replacement will require that approximately 5 to 7 times as many fence posts be used as would be required if penta-treated post were used.

Cocoon silk production requires abundant quantities of mulberry leaf such as those grown in the Edward P. Bell orchard. These conditions are aids to successful cocooning, says Mr. Bell.

Oats provide such an unusual amount of grazing and holds the soil so well on Hancock county farms that Otto Kester believes it should be planted in all supplemental pastures. Kester, a commissioner of the Hancock county soil conservation district, recently planted approximately 40 acres of oats with re-seeding crimson clover.

STATE OIL INDUSTRY HAS "COME OF AGE" EVANS TELLS PARLEY

Mississippi's oil and gas industry, which has doubled in size in the last five years, has now "come of age," President J. P. Evans, Jr., of Jackson, told the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association (Mississippi-Alabama division), at its annual meeting in Jackson Tuesday.

"Today there are over 1500 producing wells in 33 fields in Mississippi," Mr. Evans declared, "oil production is approximately 100,000 barrels a day and total daily gas production, as of August, averaged 252,697 MCF (thousand cubic feet). Daily average of saleable gas in August was 133,704; with the coming of winter of course these figures should rise.

"So far this year, six new oil and gas fields have been discovered and exploration is continuing.

"The oil and gas industry has become one of the major segments of Mississippi's economy. The industry employs approximately 4,000 men and women and has an annual payroll of $12,000,000. It is contributing a substantial portion of the tax revenue of the state, of more than $5,000,000 paid in severance tax alone during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949."

Praising the Legislature for the enactment of a "modern and comprehensive conservation law" in 1948, he noted that "under this new law an Oil and Gas Board was created to regulate the drilling for and production of oil and gas so that the maximum amount of oil and gas might be recovered without waste."

He pointed to action of the board earlier this year in taking over the Mississippi Oil and Gas Engineering Committee staff "and the mass of data which this committee had compiled during its existence," declaring addition of this engineering staff has greatly increased its effectiveness.

The state and the industry, he said, "are fortunate in having a regulatory body of the character and ability that makes up the Mississippi Oil and Gas Board; its members have taken a keen interest in their assignment and have approached the problems confronting them fairly and impartially."

"President Evans too praised the severance tax division of the State Tax Commission, headed by Hall Wallace, which, he said, has "won industry-wide recognition for their comprehensive knowledge of oil industry taxation."

Reviewing activities of the organization the past year, he said that "we have attempted to work with all groups for the benefit of the state as a whole, and I feel this is recognized by the people."

"Urging a strong organization to represent this basic American industry," Mr. Evans concluded that "this is necessary not only for the well being of our individual companies but because those who would convert the United States into a socialist economy place the oil and gas industry high on their list to be nationalized; it is imperative that we continue our efforts toward making our association a vigorous one—ever on the alert to fight for those measures which promote the progress of the industry and of the nation—and to fight against anything designed to cripple the industry or our competitive free enterprise system."

No Benefit Increase For Widows of Vets

Many widows of veterans of the First and Second World Wars will be disappointed when they receive their compensation checks from the Veterans Administration on January 1, 1950. These widows have been led to believe that under the provisions of a recent Act of Congress there will be a general across the board increase in their benefits. This is not true.

No increase in the compensation paid to the widow of a veteran of WW I or WW II will be made unless her husband died in service or from a disease or disability due to military service and then ONLY if she has a minor child of the veteran in her custody.

No increase whatsoever will be paid to the widow of a veteran whose death was not due to service or a service incurred disability.

No unmarried widow who does not have the custody of a minor child or children of a veteran who died in service or because of a service incurred disability will receive an increase in compensation from the Veterans Administration.

The dependent parents of a man who died in service or because of a service incurred disability will not receive an increase in death compensation.

To repeat—only the unmarried widow of a veteran who died in service or because of service AND who has in her custody the minor child of such a veteran will receive an increase in her VA compensation check. In these cases and these alone the monthly payments will be increased from $100 to $105. The monthly rate for additional minor children will be increased from $15 to $25.

Effective date of this increase in pension is December 1, 1949. It should be reflected in checks received on or about January 1, 1950.

MIX YOUR SPAGHETTI IN THE ITALIAN WAY

To paraphrase the old axiom, "when making spaghetti, do as the Romans." Here's one of the three different styles, all based on authentic Italian recipes, which are printed in the November issue of Good Housekeeping magazine.

ITALIAN SPAGHETTI
1 No. 2 1/2 can tomato puree (3 1/2 cups)
1 lb. Italian sausage
1 lb. chuck beef, ground
1/2 cup sifted dried bread crumbs
1 peeled small clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese

1 egg
1/2 teasp. salt
1/8 teasp. pepper
1 6 oz. can tomato paste (2 1/2 cup)
1 teasp. salt
4 teasp. pepper

1 minced, peeled small onion
1 tablesp. granulated sugar
1 1/2 lbs. raw thin spaghetti
Parmesan cheese, grated

1. Put tomato puree and 1 can water (measured in same can) in large kettle. Bring to boil over high heat; then turn heat very low, so sauce just simmers.

2. Cut sausage into serving-size pieces 1 1/2 inch long; prick, and place in skillet. Cook over low heat until brown on all sides, turning when necessary.

3. Meanwhile, combine next 8 ingredients; mix well, shape into balls about size of golf balls.

4. Remove sausage from skillet. Add meat balls to fat left in skillet, and cook until golden-brown and crusty then turn off heat, add sausage; cool; chill.

5. To simmering puree, add tomato paste, 4 cans water (measured in same can), salt, pepper, and minced onion. Continue simmering, uncovered, for 1 1/2 hrs.

6. Then add browned meat balls and sausages. Cook, uncovered, over very low heat so mixture just simmers—2 to 3 hrs. or until sauce is of the consistency of heavy cream. Add sugar 15 min. before done. Meanwhile cook spaghetti; drain; arrange in rounds on large platter.

7. Pour sauce over spaghetti, and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Makes 9 generous servings.

Do Your Fall Gardening Jobs Now

By Miss M. J. Williams

You can do a number of seemingly little garden jobs these crisp November days. They'll all make your gardening easier and more profitable next spring.

For example as you rake the leaves from your yard and fence corners, don't burn them. "Pen" them up for next year's compost and mulching material. The material from your compost heap or pit is good for flowers and shrubs, as well as vegetables.

During the fall and winter, the vegetables in your garden will leave a lot of unused space. Give this space a good "house cleaning." Stack tomato stalks, roll the vines, remove old vines, plants and stubble, clean along with both the inside and outside of the garden fence.

All the weeds and grass you destroy early will mean less trouble with insects and diseases in your garden next year.

Here's a job that'll help out on your winter grocery bill. Dig and store such root crops, as turnips, beets, carrots, and rutabagas in cellars and banks. An easier way, however, if the plot is well drained, is to cut the tops off the plants one inch above the roots and leave them in the ground over winter. Cover the roots with a furrow of soil before severe weather starts. Use them as needed.

You can still save a few good vegetable seeds. Popular ones are lima beans, field peas, pepper and okra. Save only pods from healthy, vigorous, growing plants.

NATIONAL KIDS' DAY PLANNED FOR NOV. 19

Upwards of 1,000,000 underprivileged children will benefit from programs initiating on National Kids' Day, Saturday, Nov. 19 in hundreds of communities throughout the United States and Canada. O. E. Peterson, executive secretary of Kiwanis International, estimated on the basis of reports received at the general office here.

Kiwanis International, with its 3,000 local Kiwanis Clubs and the National Kids' Day Foundation, Inc., are sponsoring the observance which will be devoted to the problems of underprivileged boys and girls and to attract public attention to youth accomplishments. Hundreds of Kiwanis clubs already have completed plans for their local programs, according to reports arriving at the general office.

An outstanding feature of National Kids' Day, explained Peterson, is the fact that programs to aid the underprivileged are being developed on a local basis. Money raised to provide educational, medical and recreational facilities for the less fortunate youth will be spent in the local communities.

"The problem of underprivileged children," commented Peterson, "is a local one and must be solved on a community basis. Problems of both the underprivileged and juvenile delinquency are tied together and in meeting the former we can reduce the dangers of the latter. Through National Kids' Day, Kiwanis hopes to rally all of the forces concerned with youth in the various communities. It is gratifying to read of the enthusiasm with which Kiwanis clubs everywhere are launching their local programs."

"The local programs are non-commercial, and the day will not be observed as a gift-giving occasion. If we can provide aid and inspire hope in the future for the less fortunate, National Kids' Day will have accomplished its purpose."

HISTORIC FIRST CAPITAL OVERLOOKED BY MOTORISTS

To the average motorist speed-ing down the "Old Man River Trail" through the Mississippi Delta, into Vicksburg, and on to Natchez, the sleepy little village of Washington, just six miles north-east of Natchez, is little more than a junction of two highways—U.S. 61 and 84.

But to the historian exploring Mississippi's turbulent and colorful past, Washington offers an exciting and as adventurous a chapter in American life as can be found in any equally limited setting.

For Washington, in turn Mississippi's second Territorial and first state capital, has witnessed from its vantage point at the foot of the Natchez Trace a procession of events and people closely tied to the destinies of Mississippi and the great Southwest country.

Today a few reminders—a church, a school, a few granite markers and two huge oak trees—are about the only evidence of the importance of the little town which was once the Territorial Capital, the first state capital and a community of wealth, culture and social prestige.

Although bustling, nearby Natchez was considered the center of wealth, culture and grandiose living during the glorious later cotton years, Washington was a rival of the older town both in opulence, and all the higher influences of life.

Laid out by Andrew Elliott, the boundary commissioner for the United States, Washington in 1802 was selected the capital of the Territory, after its acquisition by the United States following Spanish and French rule. The first session of the new Territorial Legislature was held in the new Capital, and the first charter ever granted by that body incorporated Jefferson College on May 13, 1802, the oldest endowed college in this part of the country. The institution, which later was merged with Washington College, established in 1807, is still open today despite noticeable marks of time.

Many of the students enrolled here later became distinguished in the annals of the state. Among them were Jefferson Davis and Albert B. Brown. The world-famous naturalist, Audubon, was one of the school's drawing masters, and James Ingraham, the author of pirate tales and later a congressman, was a member of its faculty.

Here in 1815 Andrew Jackson, camped while en route to the famous Battle of New Orleans, and paused again on his return trip, and in 1825 Lafayette paused long enough to witness a drill of cadets.

Another significant educational advancement which took place at this historic town was the establishment of Elizabeth Female Academy, the first school exclusively for girls and the first girls' school in the United States to have legislative recognition of its authority to confer degrees.

In the days of its prosperity, when the seat of the Territorial government, and when the wealthiest and most eminent men had their residences in Washington, there were three large hotels located there. The town also boasted the land office, the surveyor-general's office, the court of claims office, and all the courts.

Fort Dearborn, housing a permanent cantonment of U.S. troops, was situated nearby and at one time or another General Winfield Scott, B. E. Johnson and Wade Hampton served tours of duty. It was here that General Scott fought his first duel.

The noted historian, Claiborne, a native of Adams county, had this to say about Washington in his day.

"It was a gay and fashionable place, compactly built for a mile or more from east to west, every hill occupied by some gentleman's chateau. The presence of the military had its influence on society. Funfests and ceremony, parades and public entertainments were the features of the place."

It was here that Mississippi's first constitution was adopted in a Methodist meeting house, first established in the Southwest Territory. The name Mississippi was selected by a narrow vote over Washington, which was the first capital of the state until 1821. Dept. Of Archives Photo.

"It was the haunt of politicians and office-hunters. The center of political intrigue, the point to which all persons in pursuit of land or occupation first came. It was not infrequently snubbed by one or more duels."

"Claiborne sums up his observations thus:

"In its forums there was more oratory, in its salons more wit and beauty than we have ever witnessed since, all now moldering, neglected and forgotten in the past."

Historic Jefferson Military Academy, established at Washington under the first charter issued by the Territorial government of Mississippi, was once attended by Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee. The academy was one of the nation's renowned military schools. The academy was one of the nation's renowned military schools. The academy was one of the nation's renowned military schools.

the desolate graveyard of the ancient capital of Mississippi. Washington not only was the seat of government and a capital of culture and social opportunities, but boasted one of the early manufacturers of the cotton gin, which bears the manufacturer's name, Eleazar Carver. And historians also give supporting evidence to the belief that cottonseed oil, today an important money product, may have been developed there.

The same spirit of independence which had shaken off European claims to the territory became manifest during this period, however, and quarrels arose between the people and their appointed territorial governors. By 1810 the Territory was clamoring for statehood, and in 1817 the western portion was admitted to the Union by act of Congress on December 10th, as the State of Mississippi.

The first constitution was written by George Poindexter, an exceptionally brilliant lawyer who represented the Whites of the State. It was a reflection of the conservative if not actually aristocratic character of the Natchez district planters.

A marker on the grounds of the Jefferson Military Academy is about the only reminder today on the spot where Mississippi camped into statehood and received her name.

Nearby, stand two giant oak trees, known as Burr Oaks. It was here that Aaron Burr was tried for treason following an expedition launched by him in 1806 in the hope of occupying Spanish territory with the hope of creating a new state in the Southwest.

Burr's plans were blocked only by the duplicity of James Wilkinson and an alignment of national forces that found President Jefferson taking the side of Burr's chief adversary. However, when Burr surrendered to Mississippi authorities in January 1807, and was awaiting trial at Washington, leaders of the community vied with one another for the honor of entertaining him as their guest.

Incidents such as this serve to invest the ancient town of Washington with surpassing historic interest, much of which is overlooked by present day tourists intent on making the next big city by night.
